

"Depression and anxiety disorders are estimated to cost the global economy $1 trillion per year in lost productivity"

84% of employees would consider leaving their current job for a position with a company that offers better mental health benefits

72% of employees consider mental health coverage when choosing an employer

91% of organizations offered some type of mental health coverage in 2020. Are you keeping up with the competition?

Companies that prioritize employee well-being have higher employee engagement, lower turnover, and greater financial performance

The Cost of Ignoring Mental Health

By ignoring the mental health needs of employees, companies risk incurring high costs in the form of lost productivity, high turnover rates, and lower overall business performance.

